My name is Mirza Chiragov, I am a lawyer and researcher. For more than 10 years I have been studying fundamental human rights, writing articles, books, hosting a podcast (I interviewed the President of the Constitutional Court of Georgia, the director of the Memorial, the Judge of the Constitutional Court of Lithuania, etc.). I teach law at 3 universities in different countries and have also given public lectures at the invitation of the EU on the topic of freedom of expression on the Internet. For 2 weeks I started teaching a free course on human rights for the “Kovcheg” project. My course was supported by Amnesty International

In the practical area, I specialize in private law. In particular, I have been developing LegalTech in Azerbaijan and Georgia for several years. I host a video podcast¹ on this topic with different lawyers from different countries. I give lectures, create legal products and develop this area in the CIS.

I have included part of my achievements in my portfolio, demonstrating my active and honest position and loyalty to the law. In addition, I am attaching a document with my public lectures. I started my master's degree at EHU two years ago. Unfortunately, at that time there were not enough students in my field of study. Since I am a citizen of Azerbaijan, I have a lot of visa and medical expenses for studying. In addition, flights from Baku to Lithuania are quite expensive. I would really appreciate financial support.
